VOLTA AFRICAN AND POLITICAL SOCIETIES

In the past few years thousands of African Migrants have lost their lives to the Mediterranean Sea during their attempt to reach Europe escaping war, famine, persecution or misery.

While these recurring tragedies invariably attract short bursts of media attention, a discussion of the underlying causes is typically absent. This Volta series addresses the events responsible for this unprecedented African Exodus and queries the role of Europe in the handling of this crisis. In the third lecture of the series Z Marks highlights conflict as a key determinant of the African exodus and addresses the difficult prospects for peace.
